Governor Smith has signed the anti-treating bill.

Garfield will probably have something to say in this administration, Roscoe Conkling to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. Conkling wants to be President, so far as the New York appointments are concerned. He was until Hayes sat upon him.

If the reports from Washington are true, the time will soon come when the strength of the backbone of the present administration will be tested.

If the top rail holds out, Senator Davis will continue to remain on the fence, once in awhile getting off and going over to the Democrats to show that he is not a partisan.

The Democrats will have a hard time of it for some time to come. They can't get offices, and can't drink at the expense of others. Their last hope was blasted by Governor Smith's pen.

The Milwaukee Republican has been enlarged to a seven column quarto sheet. It is now the largest daily paper published in the State, and it will not be necessary to add that it is one of the very best.

It is said Senator Argus Cameron was once the school-master of Senator McPherson, of New Jersey. We don't understand how Senator Cameron permitted young McPherson to grow up to be a Democrat.

The Hon. H. L. Palmer, of Milwaukee, who has been as stiff a Democrat as any man in Wisconsin, told a Chicago Times reporter last Friday, that he had no opinion of the Democratic party. So in his estimation, the party is not worthy of an opinion!

The question yet to be settled is whether there is to be a "boss" of this administration outside of the White House. If the imperious Senator from New York thinks he can carry the administration in his pocket, he should be undeceived immediately.

Charles W. Fish, gets a thousand dollars a week for riding a horse without a saddle around a circus ring; and James A. Garfield gets less than a thousand dollars a week for running the government of the greatest and the richest country on earth.

Says the State Journal: "Hon. Amos P. Prichard, of Janesville, has accepted a call from many of the most prominent citizens of Rock county, without distinction of party, to again allow the use of his name as a candidate for county judge. He has held that office almost from time immemorial, and it is more creditable to him that he has administered the office with such universal satisfaction to the public than no candidate is ever nominated against him."

The special committee to which was referred the bill to change the management of the State institutions, and to abolish the State board of charities and reform, has made a report, and have presented a bill which is a compromise between the plans of Senators Sutherland and Richardson. The compromise bill creates a board consisting of five members, who are to receive $2,000 per year and their expenses, with a secretary at each institution, who shall receive a salary of $2,500. It is thought the new bill will pass.

The Hon. L. B. Casswell, member of Congress from the Second district, has been in Madison since his return from Washington, and when interviewed in regard to the Federal patronage of this State, he said neither Senators Sawyer nor Cameron had any idea in interfering with Federal patronage in this district, and that the newspaper reports that Colonel E. W. Keyes was to be removed from the United States postoffice here or Colonel Frank W. Oakley from the United States Marshall's office, were mere sensational stories and contained not a particle of truth in fact.

Colonel J. J. S. Wilson, of Chicago, who has been superintendent of the western district of the Western Union telegraph company for nearly thirty-three years, and who resigned last Saturday, is a cousin of Mr. D. D. Wilson, of Janesville. Colonel Wilson became an accomplished operator years ago, and when he assumed the management of the western district, the telegraphic system was in its infancy in the West. Under his administration its growth was marvelous, and at the time of his resignation he had more than 30,000 miles of wire under his control. Undoubtedly the operations of Jay Gould had something to do with the resignation of Colonel Wilson.

ABOUT WOMEN DOCTORS.

About two weeks ago Dr. Rachel Bodley, Dean of the Woman's Medical College, in Philadelphia, made a report concerning the whereabouts and the success of the 276 graduates of that institution. This college has been in existence for nearly thirty years, and during that time has graduated 276, of which 244 are still living. Mrs. Doctor Bodley, sent a note to each of these 244, asking for information as to her success, income, welcome into medical fraternities, and what is more important, the effect of professional duties upon her life as wife and mother. It appears that only 181 out of the 244, paid any attention to the inquiries of Dr. Bodley. It will be presumed that the 63 who were not in a condition to make answers, did not have a pleasant tale to tell and therefore kept silent. Of the 181 who answered, 30 had abandoned the profession, and of the 151 remaining, 98 had properly devoted themselves to the diseases peculiar to women. Fifty-nine of them were engaged as resident or visiting physicians in some asylum or hospital for girls. One town in Massachusetts, and another in Michigan, employed women as city physicians.

That which will interest the public most, and especially those more immediately interested in the welfare of women physicians, is the question of annual incomes. Only 76 of the 244 addressed, made answers as to the financial success of their professional life. The conclusion is that those who refused to answer on this very important point, were not meeting with the success desired. Of the 76 who answered the question, 4 reported that their annual incomes were from $15,000 to $20,000. Twenty-four gave their incomes at from $1,000 to $2,000, and 10 reported less than $1,000. The average income of the 76 appears to have been $2,907 for the past year.

The last question, but by no means the least, was "what influence have the study and practice of medicine had upon your domestic relations as wife and mother?" Three said their profession prevented them from getting married; 43 said they had married, and the effect was favorable; 6 not entirely favorable; and one who was probably more unfortunate, at least more candid than the rest, acknowledged that her marriage had been unfavorable.

SAT CLARK ON THE WEATHER.

There have been a great many statements made that the winter of 1881 has been the severest ever known in Wisconsin. Mr. Sat. Clark, of Horicon, who is one of the oldest settlers in the State, and a close observer of passing events, has written a letter which dispels the notion of the unparalleled severity of the winter just closing. Mr. Clark writes about the winter of 1842-3, which old settlers will remember as a season of remarkable severity. The letter was written to Mr. Whiteley, who asked for information in regard to the temperature and storms of the winter of 1842-3.

Mr. Whiteley, who was then living at Racine, says the first snow fell on the 10th of November, 1842, and was between two and three feet deep, and that the first patch of bare ground the next season in Racine, was seen on the 14th of April, 1843. Mr. Clark's observations were taken at Fort Winnebago, now Portage, in this State, and the different conditions of the weather were noted in his diary. He records the snow which fell on the 10th of November, 1842, between two and three feet deep on a level. From the 10th of November to the end of the month, the mercury stood from 8 to 29 degrees below zero; and from the 3d to the 5th of December, it snowed heavily, more than three feet of new snow falling during three days, which made the snow already six feet deep on the level. From that time till spring, travel by teams was suspended. Mails were stopped, and the only mail which was brought to Fort Winnebago, during that winter, was brought on snow-shoes. Mr. Clark also says that on the 25th of April, 1843, he hauled wood on runners, on the 26th of the same month, there was a horse trot on the ice on the Wisconsin river, between two French points!

Three times during the winter the mercury congealed, and very many days, the thermometer was more than 30 degrees below zero. At Fort Winnebago, there was snow continuously from October 11, 1842, to April 25, 1843. When the break-up came, there was no floods, and the streams were not higher than they usually were in the spring. There was very little frost in the ground, and when the snow melted the water disappeared in the ground.

The present indications are that the snow itself will not raise the streams in Wisconsin high enough to do any serious damage to the water powers. After the third heavy snow storm which fell on the 3d and 4th of March, there were serious apprehensions lest the sudden breaking up of winter would make such a rise in the rivers or to work vast damage, but it seems the danger is past, the gradual disappearance of the snow without rain, putting an end to all fears of a destructive rise in the river, and consequent damage to the water powers.

THE DAUBER SHOOTING.

WACKESHA, March 28.—Mrs. H. Showman, the heroine of the Dauber-Showerman shooting affair, has decamped from Brookfield, her home, leaving no trace by which her whereabouts can be ascertained. The public sentiment against her was too strong for her to face, and thinking, no doubt, that discretion would be the better part of valor, she has left the scenes of her late notorious career. Showman has been arrested and held to bail in the sum of $1,000. Dr. Philmer, Dauber's attending physician, says that when the true inwardness of this case comes to be known, Dauber will come in for a share of public sympathy; that he is an unfortunate victim of a woman's wiles.

HE WILL FIGHT.

Conkling Will Fight Robertson's Confirmation Tooth and Nail.

NEW YORK, March 28.—There is going to be fun of the most pronounced type over the New York appointments, at least those pertaining to the custom house. As I telegraphed last night, Mr. Conkling has taken up the hatchet, and he does not propose to bury it until after he has brained somebody. The Senator is on the war path. The conference which he is reported to have held with Senator Platt and the leading adherents of his wing of the Republican party, has stirred up more briskenly than ever the interest that was felt in this affair, and politicians are busily engaged canvassing the situation. It appears from this telegram that two weeks ago the President invited Senator Platt to call upon him to confer regarding New York appointments. This he did, but they were so seriously interrupted by callers that Senator Platt had no opportunity to refer to the object of his visit. A few days later the President invited Senator Conkling to call for the same purpose. The interview was interesting and friendly, and lasted three hours. Mr. Conkling contented himself with the simple request that President Garfield would confer with him concerning the Federal appointments in this State, to which the President gave what Senator Conkling understood to be a hearty assent. This interview took place March 20. On the following Tuesday the appointments were made as published. Neither of the New York Senators, it is claimed, had been consulted with reference to any of these nominations, and while all five were apparently Conkling men, two of them at least were certainly such as would not have been selected had the New York Senators been consulted. Following these five appointments came that of Judge Robertson, who was Conkling's fiercest opponent. "The fact appears to be that the whole programme was the work of the 'magnetic' Secretary of State. He, it is understood, handed in to the President the names of the five persons who were sent to the Senate on Tuesday of last week."

He foresaw the storm which would be raised by the announcement of these nominations, and he had trimmed his sails to take advantage of the gale. The nominations were received by the Senate on Tuesday morning. During the afternoon and evening of that day Secretary Blaine and the President assert that telegrams poured in protesting against the nominations. Then it was that Mr. Blaine suggested to the President the name of Judge Robertson, his Blaine's ardent adherent and advocate for the evils which the Administration had brought on itself by its action. The President good-naturedly assented to this view with the result now well known.

The question now is, will Senator Conkling oppose these nominations? This question, it is believed, may definitely settled in the affirmative. The nomination of Judge Robertson, Senator Conkling will certainly oppose with all his power to the end.

MAHONE.

More About the Virginia Senator and His Speech To-Day—It Has a Solidifying Effect on the Democracy—Voorhees and Others to Reply.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The mere announcement that Senator Mahone would reply to the criticisms upon his political course in acting with the Republicans of the Senate, was sufficient to draw one of the largest audiences ever seen within the walls of the Senate chamber to-day, and more failed to get admittance than were present. Even the floor of the Senate chamber was crowded with the most distinguished persons in Washington. Mr. Mahone began his speech soon after the Senate was called to order, and there was some disappointment when it was seen that he had his remarks all written out. The audience evidently hoped that he would speak without notes, and attack his late political associate right and left. He was closely listened to by both sides of the chamber, and it was soon apparent that he had the courage to assert his convictions. The speech in the main was a defense of his course in Virginia politics, and he took occasion to say, in perfectly parliamentary terms, that those who had asserted that he had sold out his convictions were violators of the truth.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 28.—Mahone's speech was the feature of the day, but nothing like as sensational as his first. The Senate was crowded, all expecting a sharp war of words, but the Democrats did not interrupt it, the feeling apparently being among them to let him alone. About 2:30 p. m. Mahone thoroughly warmed up, and frequently left his manuscript to speak extemporaneously. He defended Riddleberger, and said he is made of sterner stuff than the Democrats think. Mahone attacked Senator Johnson pretty severely, saying Johnson was elected to the Senate because he had no record, and could be elected again on the same ground, as he had done nothing. Towards 3 o'clock the attention at first paid Mahone became distracted, and conversation on the floor and gallery caused confusion.

Mahone's speech has apparently had the effect of strengthening the determination of the Democrats in the fight. They consider it an assault on the entire Democracy, and especially on the South, and say they will never yield and allow the election of Mahone's friend, Riddleberger. The feeling has grown so bitter, that even if Riddleberger should be withdrawn, it is doubtful if the Democrats would cease filibustering.

Messrs. Voorhees, Brown and other Democratic Senators attacked by Mahone, will reply. Voorhees has been collecting Mahone's past history, and will make, it is said, a severe speech.

A GIRL OF NERVE.

A Mad Dog Choked to Death by a Twelve Year Old Girl.

CINCINNATI, March 27.—Dispatches from New Albany, Ind. give an account of a mad dog being choked to death by a young girl 12 years of age. The girl is a daughter of Jacob Hessians, a German farmer living some six miles west of New Albany. She was, it appears, engaged in play at her home, surrounded by some younger members of the family when she was attacked by a small dog in a way that caused her to believe him mad. Seeing that to escape and also preserve the others from danger by other than a bold course would be impossible, she watched her opportunity, and seizing the animal by the naked throat, choked it to death. It is believed that she is uninjured, though it is not impossible that she may have received some of the poison into her system through some slight scratches upon her hands.

THE DESIRE FOR DEATH.

IOWA CITY, March 28.—Miss Hattie Denell, the fasting lady, was still living at 7 o'clock this evening. At 6 o'clock she had a very severe sinking spell, which her attendants thought must result fatally. She rallied in a few moments, however, and really seemed better than before. Her pulse rose to 120, almost imperceptibly, and her breathing was a trifle harder. Last night she had some conversation by means of her slate, with her sister Mrs. Aylworth, and Mrs. Carleton. She began by writing on her slate: "Do you think I am going to live always?" She gave a negative reply to the question whether she suffered pain. She was then asked if she would have begun again on her course of starvation had she known what she must undergo. To this she gave a most emphatic affirmative reply. She was asked if she had lived longer than she expected at the outset, to which she replied: "Yes, though I had no idea at all how long it would take."

THE VETO.

Reasons Why the Governor Vetoed the Janesville Charter.

MADISON, March 25.—A message from the Governor was received, stating the reasons for vetoing the Janesville charter; the charter is double the necessary length, and filled with objectional features. On motion of Mr. Lawrence, consideration of the matter was laid over until Wednesday morning. The veto is as follows:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Madison, March 26, 1881.

To the Honorable Assembly: I respectfully return without approval, for further legislative consideration, Assembly bill No. 209, entitled "a bill to reduce the act incorporating the city of Janesville, and the several acts amendatory thereof into one act, and to amend the same."

This bill has several features which to me seem to contravene the provisions of the constitution. It provides, for example, that no person shall be a qualified elector at any city election unless he shall have resided in the ward where he offers to vote for at least twenty days preceding the day of such election; that all penalties imposed by the charter shall be paid into the city treasury for the use and benefit of the city; that tax and assessment rolls shall be conclusive evidence of the regularity and legality of the proceedings for the assessment, levy and collection of taxes and special assessments; and that the city shall be exempt from all liability for accidents occasioned by the negligence of contractors improving the public streets or by reason of defective sidewalks. It also fails to provide for the equalization by the board of review or to fix any limitation upon the amount of municipal indebtedness which may be created—particularly in the matter of the construction of bridges.

Several of the objectionable features here noted occur more than once, and in connection with different subjects, so that it would be quite impossible to make the necessary corrections without revising or rewriting the entire bill. And indeed that should be done, not now, in the last days of a long session, but by a thoroughly competent person, in his office, with plenty of time for thought and deliberation. I am well aware that many of the provisions to which objections are now urged are copied literally from the present charter of the city of Janesville and the successive amendments thereto, and they appear in not a few other city charters. But they are none the less objectionable for this reason, and when a charter is to be revised, they should be carefully eliminated therefrom.

I beg also to call attention to the unnecessary and unwarrantable length of this charter. I feel sure certain it might be curtailed one-half, and then embody all that is required to make it a complete and perfect charter for any city in the State. It is quite unnecessary to incorporate page after page of the Revised Statutes into every act incorporating a city, or to embody in a charter a full system of municipal jurisprudence with detailed instructions and forms.

WILLIAM E. SMITH.

THE LATE SENATOR.

MADISON, March 28.—The following letter, acknowledging the receipt of the resolutions adopted by the Legislature upon the death of the late Senator Carpenter, has been received by Governor Smith:

WASHINGTON, March 21.—My Dear Governor Smith—I have received the resolutions of respect to the memory of my dear husband, passed in the name of the people of Wisconsin, by the Senate and Assembly, and they have touched my heart deeply. I appreciate, also, your kind note of sympathy, as I did your telegram, received that sad day when the light of my life went out. Thank you for all.

I am encouraged to believe we may leave Washington with our beloved dead the last of the week, or, at the very latest, by Monday of next week. The delay has been unavoidable, and has been regretted by my children and myself, but we were quite helpless in the matter. Very sincerely yours, CAROLINE CARPENTER.

UNDER THE CARS.

WHITEWATER, March 28.—An 11-year-old boy, son of the late Dr. Ensing, was so badly hurt by falling under the cars of the west-bound freight, this afternoon, that he survived but a few hours. One leg was taken off below the knee, the other at the hip. The body was badly mangled. The boy was trying to catch a ride on the train.

A DESPERATE WOMAN.

MILWAUKEE, March 28.—Ida Warner, of Watertown, attempted to commit suicide last night, owing to domestic trouble. She was restored to consciousness, and has since disappeared. She threatened to repeat the attempt.

Our items of last week were sent to Janesville in time to appear in the weekly, but the officials at the Janesville postoffice failed to take the mail out of the bag, but instead put a lot of mail matter in it and sent the bag back to this office. The Janesville office needs a new bag shaker.

Supervisors—R. J. Greenman, Chairman; H. L. Stockman, W. H. Morgan, Town Clerk—L. T. Rogers, Assessor—P. Marquart, Treasurer—J. C. Rogers, Justices—E. P. Clark and D. E. Thorpe.

Constables—J. S. Mills, Russell Frink, J. C. Davidson and C. W. Crumb.

A FAMOUS HUNTER.

How He Made $175 in a Wolf Fight on the Top of Roan Mountain.

Knoxville (Tenn.) Tribune.

Some years ago, but little hunting having been done for some time, the wolves became very numerous as well as very destructive not only in southwestern Virginia, but fearfully so in western North Carolina; so much so that but few sheep had escaped them in the vicinity of the Black, Yellow and Roan mountains, in Rip Van Winkle's dominions.

The fame of Wilburn Waters as an intrepid and successful hunter and trapper having gone out into all that country, a number of farmers and stock-raisers whose folds had been broken up and scattered—some six in all—drew up an obligation to give him one sheep each for every wolf he would capture, in addition to the five dollars bounty given by the county for each scalp. Wilburn accepted the proposition and killed several wolves, but the depredations continued. He again started on a hunt. According to Coale's life he held out faithfully, though the wolves led him from mountain to mountain and from gorge to gorge, to great distances and for weeks. But when he returned with the scalps, not only of all that gang, but of others, making in all forty-two wolves as his winter's hunt. Besides these he captured during the hunt a number of catamounts, a few bears, an otter or two and any number of wild turkeys and other small game.

During the same general hunt he had an exciting time with a detachment of five wolves that had wandered off to some distance from the main gang. He was entirely alone, without even a dog, high up one of the tall peaks of the Roan mountains, and several miles away from the nearest human inhabitant. The five wolves he was in search of were old ones and three half grown. They had destroyed a great deal of stock in the range as well as in the adjacent valleys, running out dogs that had been put upon the trail and even evincing a disposition to attack man when alone. Wilburn had found "sign" and had followed it up a tall cliff near the summit of the highest and most inaccessible peaks in the range.

It was a sultry, drizzly day, and having greatly fatigued himself working his way through tangled vines and level jungles and climbing over and around steep and ragged precipices, he lay down to rest under a shelving rock and fell asleep. In about an hour he awoke refreshed, and crawling out of his resting place he found that the old leader of the gang had been reconnoitering while he had slept, and had passed along on the ledge a few feet below him. Picking up his gun and tomahawk, he took the trail, and, on approaching a precipice, he saw the old male wolf at its base quietly licking his chops and apparently winding prey or an enemy in the distance. Stealthily advancing within convenient range, Wilburn brought his shot-gun to bear and fired, and the largest and most formidable wolf of the gang fell dead without a struggle. Scanning the skin, he made his way with great difficulty to the top of the precipice and there, just beyond the turn of the summit, he saw the four others, three of them gamboling like puppies around the dam, not having heard the report of the gun under the cliff. They were in an open place, and it was very difficult to get within range without being seen, heard or winded, but he made out to "snake" it to within forty yards of them and "pulled down." Two of them dropped dead, but the old dam and one of the cubs escaped into a cavern near by.

Having started out with the determination of capturing the whole family, he went to digging with a sharpened stick; he soon reached the old one which was too large to get into the hole, drew her out by the hind legs and tied her feet together. He had to widen the passage for a distance of ten or twelve feet before he could reach the other. The hole, after being thus worked out, was barely large enough to admit his body, and it being impossible for the wolf to escape, he had to meet it face to face. All that he could see of the animal was its eyes, which shone like two balls of fire in the darkness of the cavern, and having no room to operate with gun or tomahawk, he cautiously slipped his hand over the wolf's head, grasped it by the neck, brought it out and tied it as he had the other. He then marched into the settler's cave with two live wolves and three skins, without having received a scratch or wasting a load of ammunition. The day's work brought him $175, made up by the settlers whose stock had been destroyed and whose lives had been menaced by the gang.

Matt Carpenter and Judge Waite

The very audacity of the man was sublime. An incident occurred soon after the present Chief Justice Waite, of the Supreme Court of the United States, assumed his position. Nowhere is etiquette more rigidly observed than in the old Senate Chamber, which is now the gloomy United States Supreme Court chambers. Its frigid solemnity, it was once remarked, was sufficient to give a polar bear the ague. After Justice Waite had assumed the gown this strictness became even more rigid than before. An attorney presuming to address the court while wearing his overcoat was rebuked for disregard of the dignity of the court. This system did not please Carpenter, and he took a method to express his contempt for such conventionality that for audacity, exceeds anything on record. Appearing in the chamber to deliver an argument, he arose seemingly to address the court, but hesitating, advanced into the august presence of the mighty nine, and addressing the Chief Justice, requested him in the blandest manner to hand him a pinch of snuff from the snuff box which lay on the elevated desk before him. Before the Chief Justice could recover from his surprise he was holding the snuff-box extended to the complacent Carpenter, while a suppressed titter ran through the assembly and a smile rippled over the solemn countenance of more than one of the justices on the bench. "Thank you, Judge," said Carpenter, and then he proceeded with his argument.—Washington Letter.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP, will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilis, Erysipelas, Malaria, all Nervous Disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an Impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures Pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

IN TWO.

Somewhere in the world there hide. Gardegrates that no one sees. Save they come in happy throng. Not in ones, but yet in threes.

But from every maiden's door Leads a pathway straight and true, Maps and surveys know it not; He who finds, finds come for two!

Then they see the garden-gates! Never skies so blue as theirs. So the two go through the day. As for those who come in pairs.

Round and round the alleys wind, No a cradle bars their way. Now a little mound, behind, So the two go through the day.

When no work in all the lanes But has heard a song or sigh, Lo! another garden-gate Opens as the two go by!

Happier yet these garden-walks: Closer, heart to heart, they lean; Still, softer fall the kisses, And the two, and far between.

Till, at last, as they pass Down the paths so well they know Once again at hidden gates Stand the two; they enter slow.

Golden Gates of Fifty Years, May our two young hearts meet! Garden of the Sunset Land, Hold their dearest happiness.

Then a quiet walk again; Then a wicket in the wall; Then one stepping stone, then two; Then two at the Heart of All.

—W. C. Gannett.

NAUGHTY CLARA.

Beauty Tamed to Mercantile Account.

Clara Bell to Cincinnati Enquirer.
A great deal of nonsense has been written about women who serve as nude models. The effort has been to make them romantic by describing them as virtuous exhibitors of their persons. I have taken pains to learn the truth, and I assert that no decent woman gets her living as an artist's model in New York. I have also made the discovery that the women who move over in men's studios without a blush, I only do so before the female class of the art league when closely masked. They have no shame in regard to the opposite sex. I have taken pains to learn the truth, and I assert that no decent woman gets her living as an artist's model in New York.

The Terror of the White House.

From the Washington Sunday Chronicle.

President Garfield has five children. The eldest are boys, as strong and sturdy as young bucks. The first is Harry, the second James, aged respectively eighteen and sixteen years. They are studying at home under Dr. Hawkes, of Ohio, who has been their teacher since the 15th of January last. Don Rockwell, son of Colonel Rockwell, is undergoing the same course of study, and reports daily to Dr. Hawkes at the White House studio. All three boys are to be sent to Williams college, and are expected to be ready to enter there September next.

The third child as regards age is Miss Mollie Garfield, a bright blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl. She is about fourteen years of age. She attends "Mrs. Bur's" school, and is one of the accomplished and a grand pianist at the White House. She is frequently waked into melody by her mother's fingers. Miss Mollie is in lively music, and is at her best in a bright, spirited piano recital. Her parents are plain practical people with no high notions about caste or class, and, no doubt, will keep their daughter away from the giddy world of fashion until she has reached the proper age. Irwin Garfield is the fourth child. He is eleven years of age, and a regular boy. His father's exalted station does not seem to trouble him much. So far he has been able to do as he pleased around the house, and has fully improved the opportunity in his own peculiar way. He rides a bicycle like a professional, and is also an expert on roller skates. The vestibule is his chosen field of practice, and he dashes over the tiled floor on his iron steed with a reckless abandon that strikes terror to the souls of nervous callers who are compelled to run the gauntlet past this bold cavalier or forgo all chances of seeing the President in person.

Young Irwin Garfield with skill, but sometimes damages the wainscoting in avoiding the people who are constantly passing through his play ground. Several corners have been knocked away, but that is a matter of no concern to Master Irwin, who seems bent on crashing through the glass doors along the rear vestibule. Those who have watched his intricate maneuvers on the bicycle and skates have made wagers on this result.

The youngest occasionally varies his amusement by upsetting the ink and smearing the mangle over the desks of the executive clerks, who are neat and fastidious to a fault. These little freaks cause general consternation. Young Scott Hayes, who was just such another boy, went through almost the same routine about four years ago, but was soon toned down in his deportment by paternal discipline. The career of Master Irwin will be similarly curtailed when the present general stress upon the time of his parents is removed and they have more time to look after the family. Master Abram Garfield, aged eight years, is the youngest member of the household, and also the most delicate, though by no means sickly, and more inclined to literary and artistic attainments than any of the others. He is the exact antithesis of his brother Irwin, being of a mild, quiet and retiring disposition. He is a good, studious boy, and his mother's pet. Neither he nor Irwin attend school just now, but have both received sound and thorough instruction from their parents.

Webb-Footed Fowls.

The past thirty years have witnessed many agricultural follies, beginning with the "morus mulierum" fever, a little more than three decades ago; the Shang hai fever, the sheep fever, the Short-horn fever and more lately the poultry fever generally. But as it is only by disease that we are brought to appreciate health, these morbid excitements may have resulted in some good. Without desiring to create or put in motion another "boom," I wish to direct attention, as a specific branch of general agriculture, to the raising of ducks and geese for profit.

Many old farmers, and a few of the younger ones, may give a snuff of the nose at this, but a little experience has satisfied me that there is more money in ducks and geese to the farmer than in hens or turkeys. The duck is generally esteemed as a table fowl and it only needs testing to make the goose the peer of the turkey upon the Christmas board. As an egg-producer there is no fowl that will compare with ducks. They bring a slightly better price than chickens, and are raised under fair conditions, and yield a fine crop of feathers besides. The goose produces about the same number of eggs as a turkey, can be raised at half the cost, brings nearly the same price in market and yields abundantly of fine feathers.

The goose, like the cow, makes its living chiefly on grass, while the duck is the hog of the poultry yard. It will eat anything from a child's glass marble to a rattlesnake, and what is better, seems to digest everything it swallows. The proper conditions for raising these fowls profitably are a low house surrounded by a corral sufficient to turn wolves and foxes, with a pasture proportioned to the size of the flock, one acre to fifty geese. Clover is the best forage. The pasture should be divided into four compartments. Four low, shallow cast-iron bowls surrounded by pickets so that they can only get the head and neck in, make the best receptacles for water, or if convenient, a shallow running spring. The younglings of either geese or ducks must be carefully fed until three weeks old, and the best food is light bread, made from "shorts" or coarse flour and soaked in cold water. The next two weeks range from the blue grass free from weeds or anything likely to trip them, as they are easily thrown upon their back and can rarely get up without help. Of varieties, any of the large Toulouse, Bremen or Chinese geese, and of ducks, the Muscovy, black Cayuga, Pekin, or any large breed that may suit the fancy.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

A ROMANTIC relic of Cowpens battle was shown by Mr. William J. Randolph at King's Mountain during the centennial observance. The relic is a plain 22-carat gold ring, which was found on the Cowpens battle-field in 1821. The inscription reads: "This and yew given is yours forever, 1722." It was presented to a British officer by Lord Cornwallis before his departure with Lord Cornwallis for America. The officer, who was killed at the Cowpens, was free from the 20-carat gold on his uniform, and some of the buttons are still owned by Gen. Lafayette in 1826, and others were sent to England, the coat-of-arms on them revealing the family to whom they belonged.

An editor who thinks that he knows all about farming, says in speaking about straw-berry: "Last the best way to raise them is water."

efforts to save him death ensued. His parents who live in the town of Porter, take charge of the remains.

—William Fritz, of Chicago, whose skillful use of the brush, has been shown in the frescoing of the Myers house and other places in the city, has returned to Janesville, and intends making this his home. He brings with him two panel pieces which he has just painted, one of them being for Mr. E. B. Richardson and the other for Mr. L. Wyler, at whose place of business they may be seen. One is a showing of fish and the other of game, and they are both very fine bits of artistic work, and would grace the best of dining rooms. Mr. Fritz is excellent in his line, and will doubtless secure liberal patronage by locating in this city.

—Mr. B. Atwater, of Berlin, Conn., is again in the city for the purpose of buying and handling tobacco. He expected to occupy the large warehouse which the Northwestern railway company built for his use last year, but by some misunderstanding it had been given over to other parties. He therefore finds himself without any warehouse, a want which it is to be hoped may be speedily met in some way. A large amount of tobacco yet remains unsold, and it is to be hoped that he may perfect arrangements to accommodate the many sellers with whom he has gained much popularity. His son, Bryan H. Atwater, is with him, and is almost an indispensable help to the business, having charge of the books and correspondence. He was reported by one of our city papers last fall as having died, but we are glad to say he is looking so well and happy as to give promise of a long life.

—Dr. Bigelow, of Waukesha, has just been released from jail, his sentence having expired. He claims to have got the inside history of the tramps whom he has met there, and among other things asserts that he has kept a partial list of some of the veterans in that line. He says William Johnson has been in four different times under the names of Johnson, Jackson, and Rogers. "Boston Bill" has been in four times under different names, "Henry Ned" four times, Fred Green four times; Jack McCarthy three times; Jack Hamilton, four times, and each time under a different name. The doctor does not say how many times he has been committed himself, but to make the record complete, we would say that he was first sentenced to thirty days, for drunkenness, then for twenty days for a like offense, and again falling he was sentenced to seventy days. He has hence had large opportunities for getting acquainted with the tramps, and his testimony is given for what it is worth.

—Last evening there was a little rattle on the streets caused by the boisterous condition of a trio of young fellows, who live near the Leyden house, and who were rollicking up and down the streets on one of their accustomed visits to the city. At last Officer E. L. Smith essayed the arrest of one of the trio, Michael Welsh. He got along with him to near the First National bank, when his two comrades Timothy Ludden and John Ludden, interfered. Marshal Hagan rallied in support of the law, and Johnny Brown soon added the aid of his muscle, and the trio were, after some scuffling and much loud talk, safely locked up in jail. This morning they appeared in the Police Court and pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly. Welsh was fined $10 and costs, his bill being $15.95, and being unable to pay was sent to jail for twelve days. The Ludden brothers were fined each $5 and costs, and made a cash settlement.

—Patterson and Evenson, the Druggists, keep nothing but the finest drugs and chemicals. Physicians' prescriptions and family recipes accurately prepared from pure and fresh drugs, cheaper than at any other reliable drug store in the county. All the medicines advertised in this paper are sold by Patterson and Evenson, the Druggists, 100 E. Post Office.

POSTOFFICE RULING.

To the Editor.

I desire to call attention, and thereby avoid the necessity of many questions and answers, to the fact that the Post-office Department has revoked the regulation by which, heretofore, "printed commercial papers filled out in writing, such as papers of legal procedure, deeds of all kinds, way bills or bills of lading invoices, and the various documents of insurance companies, circulars or handbills," have been admitted to the mails as third class matter; and that such documents are now treated as first class matter.

A MANHOOD ENTERPRISE.

What Colonel L. B. Lent Has to Say About the Robbins & Colvin Show.

A reporter of the Evening Journal the other day had a long interview with Colonel L. B. Lent, the veteran showman, whose name is closely associated with the New York circus. In the interview he says that he does not intend to bring out a show this season, and after talking on other matters concerning the business, he says:

"As for Robbins, he has been for several years running a circus and menagerie, the best wagon-show in America, and has made piles of money. Well, this season he has more than quadrupled his show. He got a lot of wealthy capitalists interested in the scheme, organized a stock company, himself holding a lion's share, and put $1,000,000 into the biggest show that has ever been seen on the face of the earth."

"What is it called?"

"The Burr Robbins and Colvin Great American and German Allied Shows, comprising a triple circus, the finest menagerie ever organized in this country, a stock company, himself holding a lion's share, and put $1,000,000 into the biggest show that has ever been seen on the face of the earth."
